

WATER CONSERVATION FOR KIDS!

Introducing a Water Education Video Series for Students in Santa Clara County!

Sprout Up is an environmental education organization providing free nature and science video lessons for elementary students. We've teamed up with Valley Water and Save The Bay to create a new video series about water conservation. In this series we'll explore the water cycle, ways to save water, environmental justice, and hear from special guests about water in the Bay Area.

Who is it for?

This new series is for elementary students in Santa Clara County! All videos, along with their corresponding worksheets, are available in English and Spanish.

Access it via our website and Youtube

WHAT IS INCLUDED IN THE SERIES?

3 short videos about water conservation

- Lesson topics include: the water cycle, saving water, and environmental justice
- Each video is asynchronous and free

Activity sheets for each video

- Some examples include: coloring activities, explorations, projects, storytelling, and personal reflections

ABOUT US

Sprout Up is a youth-led organization that teaches children concepts in environmental science, sustainability, and the unique ecosystems that surround them. Located at university chapters in New York City and California, as well as online everywhere through Sprout Up Explores, Sprout Up is carried out as a program of Environmental Volunteers.

For over 60 years, Save The Bay has been a trusted and proven entity protecting San Francisco Bay. In 1961, three citizen activists, Sylvia McLaughlin, Kay Kerr, and Esther Gulick, were alarmed by the years of pollution and destruction to their beloved Bay. Our founders mobilized their community to “save the bay” and from these roots a movement grew. Like the challenges of the past, the threats we face now lie beyond the power of any single entity or individual to solve. With the support and partnerships of individuals, companies, and organizations Save The Bay is mounting efforts to make Bay Area communities sustainable, healthy, and equitable for all residents.
